

Nagoya University Writing Center 3rd International Symposium on Academic Writing & Critical Thinking

学術論文の基本的な目的は、結論へと至る論理的なステップを提示することによって、論文の主張する結論を受け入れるよう読者を説得することである。

Free Participation

Registration

by email:

awc1@ilas.nagoya-u.ac.jp

Symposium theme:

Clarity & Impact

Date: February 18 (Saturday), 2017

Venue: Auditorium
4/F, Institute of Liberal Arts & Sciences
Nagoya University, Japan

URL: meiwriting.ilas.nagoya-u.ac.jp

Programme Schedule:

09:00	Registration Open
09:20	Symposium Open
09:30	Invited Talk 1
10:20	Invited Talk 2
11:30	Parallel Sessions 1
12:30	Lunch
13:45	Plenary Talk
15:00	Invited Talk 3
15:50	Parallel Sessions 2
17:30	Round Table
18:15	Symposium Close

Major Talks:

Reading rhetorically to support writing instruction
John Peterson, Advanced Lecturer, Program in Writing and Rhetoric, Stanford University

10 best practices for teaching academic writing
Paul Wadden, Senior Lecturer, English for Liberal Arts Program, International Christian University

How to use the Life Science Dictionary corpus
Takeshi Kawamoto, Writing Center Director, Hiroshima University

The secret of building a logical argument
Paul Lai, Writing Center Director, Nagoya University

Analyzing distinct varieties of plagiarism
Chad Nilep, Associate Professor, Nagoya University

What are you talking about?! Practicing presentations across disciplines
Mark Weeks, Associate Professor, Nagoya University

Measuring the outcomes of critical language teacher education through concept maps
Kyle Nuske, Associate Professor, Nagoya University

Using builds to clearly present complex information to multi-disciplinary audiences
David Toohey, Associate Professor, Nagoya University

Plenary Talk:
“The secret of building a logical argument”

Round Table Discussion:
“The future of academic writing education”

